When you are born a girl, there are two roads ahead of you, peasant or not. You either do as you are told or you do not. Daughter of a long line of farmers, the prospect that being married off was the best future for her did not sound compelling. The world is big, full of wonders and things to experience, so in truth, there was only one obstacle for her. Capability to defend yourself. A three year trip into the army disguised as a young boy did the trick.

Faits marquants: During her trip in the army, she was called "Wallflower" for two reasons. First, everyone believed her to be a bit too pretty for a boy and secondly, in order to hide her true nature, she adopted the nature of being shy.
