She was the youngest child of three, and suffered for it. Her older sisters regularly claimed credit for any show of cleverness or show of initiative, often just to watch her lose composure when no-one believed her claims of plagiarism. Her constant outbursts as a result of this lead to her gaining a reputation of being ill-tempered and acting out. When her and her sister came of age to begin learning the family trade, perfuming, she was judged to be to wild. She was left to her own devices while her sisters began their apprenticeships. She didn't take it well. From then on, she spent every moment she could spying and eavesdropping on her sisters education, and every other moment was spent teaching herself through experimentation and through books from her fathers study. Faits marquants: Youngest of three, sisters take delight in claiming credit for anything of note she does. She loses her temper when no-one believes her. She gets a reputation for being petulant. Because of this, she isn't taught the family trade. She dedicated herself to learning it anyways, and opening up a shop to directly compete with her family. In an attempt to gain an edge to put them out of business for good, she enrolls in a magientist collage (with iago's help). It works. Now that she's won, she's realized she doesn't actually care about making perfume. Whoops.
