Born poor and in the woods, Wynne was adopted by a sympathetic older nobleman who had lost his entire family. He raised her as his own, then contracted leprosy and was shipped across the sea to die. She spent years finding a cure, used her own body as a guinea pig until one of her experiments backfired. The University did all they could to save her life, turning her into a Mekone, pure flux runs through her body to keep her alive.

Faits marquants: She no longer hurts, feels, or cares. She is a tool or the university and for Kingdom. She vaguely remembers a time when she loved another yet it feels as if it is a distant memory. Nothing more.
